“ Allison could do anything. We became the best of friends, but not until after she retired I was not a snob. We were inseparable and I could tell her anything. She taught me how to drive my Camaro which was a stick. We loved laughing and hanging out. She was always late to everything!! If we made plans for 7pm, I knew not to expect her until 9pm. She was always there for the underdog and would stand up for anyone. So many late nights laughing and cruising town. I miss you Alley.

“ Allison was always there for the underdog. I still remember her confronting some teens who were bullying another kid. No fear, she stepped right in and stopped it. She was like that with people and animals. No stray animal stayed stray around her. She found homes for so many. She had such a love for animals I have always admired that in her. She had such a big heart, always wanted to help. She will be so missed by so very many.
