“ Wow. 103... Just found out she died. She was always just Aunt Jean to me. It wasn't until I was older that I found out we weren't actually related. I remember her smile. So sorry to hear of her passing. She and Aunt Betty were a dear part of my history as I came from the Rowen side and saw them all the time when I was young. We lost touch through the later years when we moved south. My thoughts are with all of her family and I am so thankful for my memories.

“ Betty and Jean, co-owners of the Betty Jean Shop played an important part in downtown Bloomington, when I was a child. They were both friends of my grandma, Dorothy Catherine Romiser Moore, writer for The Star Courier, and later, The Courier Tribune. We used to take the bus downtown, from her house on E. 1st St. (for a nickel, at one time); and we would take a field trip around the square. Grandma was loyal to Jean and Betty, and proud of their friendships. She wouldn't buy cards anywhere else, for a long time. We bought a lot of candy there too. The lady who ran the elevator at Wick's at that time, was also a person we visited, then often ended our outing with a loaf of homemade bread, from Ladyman's. Yes, Jean was a prominent part of downtown Bloomington, "in the day"....(those memories are mainly from the 50's and 60's, I believe). So proud to be able to remember her!

“ Jean was a favorite of mine while we were in Altrusa together. I also knew her from the Betty Jean Shop where we visited regularly. Once she took a bunch of Altrusa members to her lake cottage and took us out on her boat. What a fun day that was. I'll always remember her fondly.
