“ Tim was a very well-respected, decent, kind and loving man. He had lived 20 years at the same apartment complex. Tim had many friends and was always being helpful to those around him. His elderly neighbors often looked to Tim to help them repair items in their home. He was always happy to oblige and spend time with them. For many years he was the one that volunteered to decorate the building's dining room for the different holidays. When I was gardening, I would often look up and find ice water waiting for me with no one around. Tim loved feeding and taming the squirrels that would come up to his patio door. There were often pieces of apple and in-shell peanuts around for the ones he had names for. Moochy and Stumpy were his two favorites. Moochy was also clearly marked and would come year after year to visit, coming up to the glass on his door. His patio was also something that he enjoyed being creative with, often changing the "theme". He was talking about the next spring's theme as a miniature putt-putt course. Moles infuriated him. The inside of his home also expressed his creativity. He had many sentimental items and would never part with a gift from a friend or loved one. Tim loved working on his '77 Rat Truck, Sherman. It was a part of who he was. He would decorate the cab ornately with sentimental articles. A writer for The Herald-Times, Laura Lane, published two articles in the column "My Favorite Ride". He was surprised and happy to read that she also plugged his first book, The Lesser Armageddon. He enjoyed the time he spent writing and had started on his third book. Tim also spoke of his life after death. He was a spiritual person and enjoyed having conversations about God and Jesus. He was not afraid to see his afterlife. He is in a much better place now, being pain-free but he will always live on in our hearts and our memories. Tim will always be fondly remembered and sadly missed by those who knew him. Our loss is deeply felt. However, the biggest loss is to those people who never knew him.

Respectfully,
Shirley D. Young
