

William Guy "Bill" Mallory

May 30, 1935 - May 25, 2018

Bill Mallory, beloved husband, father, grandfather, coach and friend, passed away peacefully at 3:08PM, Friday at Bloomington Hospice House. He was surrounded by his extended family the last days with love, gratitude and celebration. The outpouring of respect and fondness for Coach Mallory from friends was deeply appreciated by his family..

Mallory, 82, was Indiana University's football coach from 1984 through 1996. He and wife Ellie had lived in the Bloomington community since then, with wintertime residency in Naples, Fla. Their ties to community activities here won them many recognitions, among them Bill's selection by the Monroe County Sports Hall of Fame as Humanitarian of the Year in 2016.

William Guy Mallory was born May 30, 1935, to Guy and Freda Shepherd Mallory in Glendale, W. Va. His father was a smalltown high school basketball coach in southwestern Ohio, then later in mid-Ohio, near Columbus. "Dad was a big guy – 6-5," Mallory once told an interviewer. "He was a good basketball player, and he loved it. I thought I was going to be a basketball coach."

He never played football until a change of professions took his father to the north end of the state at Sandusky, Ohio. He took up the sport as a high school sophomore, and as a senior was recruited by future Hall of Fame coach Ara Parseghian at Miami of Ohio. He played freshman football, then two varsity seasons under Parseghian. As a senior Mallory was the first captain under new coach John Pont.

On graduation, he earned a master's degree while serving as a graduate assistant at Bowling Green under another College Football Hall of Fame coach, Doyt Perry. He coached one year of high school football in Ohio, went back to Bowling Green as defensive coordinator, served as an assistant under Carmen Cozza at Yale, then joined the staff of Hall of Famer Woody Hayes at Ohio State. He was an assistant on Hayes' 1968 national-championship team, then started his own head coaching career at his alma mater, Miami.

In five years at Miami, he went 39-12 and beat Florida in the Tangerine Bowl; at Colorado 35-21-1 with an Orange Bowl trip – and he was fired. After a year out of coaching, he went to Northern Illinois for four seasons, went 25-19 with a Mid-American Conference championship and California Bowl trip his last year, and Indiana hired him.

His IU career, as the school's third head coach in three years, began with an 0-11 season. Two years later, he took his team to the school's third bowl trip in history and was named by his peers as Big Ten Coach of the Year. In his fourth year, 1987, his team ended a 35-year winless run against Ohio State by winning at Columbus, 31-10. Two weeks later at home, the Hoosiers beat Michigan for the first time in 20 years, 14-10. It's the only time IU ever beat Ohio State and Michigan in the same season. Those Hoosiers went to Michigan State on the next-last Saturday of the year with the winner assured of a Big Ten championship and Rose Bowl trip. Playing without starting quarterback Dave Schnell, out with an appendectomy, the Hoosiers lost, 26-3 – and Mallory took on folk hero status in East Lansing by going after the game into the jubilant Spartan lockerroom. In a scene captured by TV cameras and replayed frequently there over the years, he acknowledged how bitter the loss was for him and his hopeful team, congratulated the Spartans and challenged them to win the Rose Bowl. He left to a roaring ovation from the MSU team, and the Spartans did end a six-year Big Ten losing streak by beating Southern California in the Rose Bowl. IU then closed an 8-3 season by beating Purdue and going to the Peach Bowl in Atlanta, and Mallory became the first Big Ten football coach to win back-to-back Coach of the Year awards.

Overall, he had seven winning seasons and took six teams to bowls, both IU records. Mallory's close ties to the players he coached are reflected by an Internet-linked fraternity of "Mal Men," well into the hundreds of former players who over the years have shared very similar tales of their own "Coach Mal" stories and maintained ties with their coach from each of his four head coaching stops. Those former players were the primary sources of the messages and condolences that poured into the family from all over the country after news broke of Mallory's Tuesday fall and grave situation.

It was at Sandusky High that sophomore Mallory met freshman Eleanor "Ellie" Sweeney. A year after his recruitment at Miami, she also enrolled there, as a music major. After both graduated there, and just as Mallory was about to begin his head coaching career at East Palestine High School near Youngstown, they were married June 14, 1958. His death came five days before his 83rd birthday, three weeks before their 60th wedding anniversary.

Surviving are their daughter Barbara Britt (and husband Jim), Long Tree, Col., their sons David (wife Martha, and great granddaughter Isabella), Michael and Scott, all of Denver, and sons Mike Mallory (wife Kim, granddaughter Kathryn and grandson William); Doug Mallory (wife Lisa, and their daughters Emily, Allison and Sarah, Atlanta, Ga.), and Curt Mallory (wife Lori, and their sons James and Sam and daughter Margo), Terre Haute. Also surviving are Coach Mallory's brothers, Tom and Dave, both of Loudonville, Ohio. Michael Britt and Tom and Dave Mallory are doctors. The three Mallory sons all are football coaches, Mike an assistant with the Jacksonville Jaguars, Doug an assistant with the Atlanta Falcons and Curt in his second year as head coach at Indiana State. Daughter Barb is a former school teacher who now works for the Colorado Center for Reproductive Medicine in Denver.

“ Dear Ellie and Family,

I cannot tell you how deeply sad I was to hear of Bill's passing. It brought me to tears. Just a wonderful coach, an even better man.

Most of us who covered Indiana football really, really enjoyed our time with Bill. He was honest and frank but enjoyed a good laugh. He treated you as a friend. When I had heart bypass surgery during early September in 1989, I received a call from Bill. It touched me deeply that he would make time to call me, to see how I was doing. I will never, ever forget that call.

Years later, when Miami University played at Florida, I was so happy to see Bill and you, Ellie, again at Florida Field. And it was again comforting to see you both at Ara Parseghian's funeral. I know how much Bill admired Ara -- we all did -- and how much Ara admired him.

As I've told you, and as I've told others, Bill deserves to be in the College Football Hall of Fame. It is a downright shame he is not. That will be rectified. My jaw is locked.

This I do know: Bill is in God's Hall of Fame. That's the one that matters most.

“ I got to know Coach when I came back to IU to work for FCA. I watched a lot of practices with him and Lee. Doug, I hated it for him when you left IU. As you know, he quit going to practice for quite awhile. I was so glad when he came back. He had a lot of reasons to be upset with IU, but that was not Coach Mallory. Curt, he talked a lot about you and ISU. One afternoon we spent a lot of the practice trying to find out if NDSU played indoors. He was glad they did! Curt, I actually met you before your Dad. i did a chapel for the Zips in Indy, the night before they played IU.

Coach was going to go with me to an FCA luncheon last Thursday. He was a great friend. Ellie and family, thank you for sharing him with so many. I will really miss him.

“ When my husband, Mike Nelson (who passed away 7 mos ago of a massive heart attack 5 days after his 70th BD) was a football coach at Wisconsin, he recruited 2 of those "Mallory boys"; Mike and Doug. I remember taking Doug skiing with our sons on his official visit (it was legal back then!). Unfortunately, neither signed with Wisconsin. But I know how much my Nellie enjoyed spending time with the Mallory family. Coaches make such an impression on their players. And I'm sure you will hear from many of them. They are a special breed. And we are lucky to know them and be in their families.

“ Coach Mallory was such a tremendous leader of people. He was the definition of hard work, compassion, integrity, mental fortitude and an unbending desire to be the best. He didn't preach it - he lived it. I was a student assistant for him in 1984 - what an honor it was to be a small part of his first team at IU. I am now entering my 25th year of coaching high school and the lessons learned from Coach Mallory are still passed on to kids today. We "lock our jaws" and outwork people and that came from him. To Ellie, Curt, Doug and Mike - my deepest sympathies. What an amazing man your father and husband was. He impacted so many lives.

“ I was failing many classes at Northern Illinois. Bill called me into his office, had my name on a bus ticket to send me home if I didn't improve(Doug Bartlett) and vibrated all of the cells in my body with the tone of his voice. I credit bill Mallory for keeping me in college and straightening me out academically.
Sincerely,

“ I'm very grateful to call Coach Mallory, "Coach" for many reasons, related to the work ethic, tenacity and values of Coach and his staff while at NIU The memory I would like to share as I got to see a side of Coach Mal, when other teammates from NIU went down to Bloomington 2 years ago to share a few meals and a round of golf together. There, during a brief rain delay on the golf course, Coach shared a few stories that I never heard before. One, when he was coaching Colorado and the decision to run the Buffalo mascot directly out on the field, possibly aimed at the officials who threatened Colorado with a 15 yard penalty, if they ran it out on the field. In a way that only Coach could tell that story, we were on the floor laughing.

The second story related to when we was on Coach Hays's staff and the film projectors were "getting broken" and Coach Mallory had to ask the AD for more money to buy replacements. At that moment, the projector cable was born; and the concept was used years later when another coach at IU had issues from throwing items (chairs) on the basketball court. Hysterical.

God bless Coach and Mrs. Mallory and all the Mallorys.

“ I was a tutor for IU athletes during a few years of coach Mallory's career. He was a good and kind man, who cared about his players very much. He always greeted me whenever he saw me, and gave me a beautiful plaque for the 1989 playing season. I know he will be missed by a large number of people.
