“ Hello again Brynn,

This is Winston and I wish we could have spoken under better circumstances. You were an important figure in the lives of both my boys; first to Ethan as his Calculus teacher, and the next as the mother of my other son Reagan's best friend, Cas. Through these connections it was a pleasure to get to know you.

I'd like to say how proud of you I was, doing everything in your ability to take care of Cas. Despite all your family's hardship you always made his well-being a priority. Single-motherhood, scleroderma, and now Cas's diabetes is an undeserved burden for anyone, but you never gave up; always looking for a way to make both your lives better. You raised Cas to be a great kid, and on the right path to becoming the same as a young man. My family and I also want to offer our heartfelt condolences and thanks to Linda for taking such very good care of you at the end.

What music is to the heart, mathematics is to the mind where you were able to create beautiful melodies. Someone once said that calculus is fundamentally naïve, almost childish in its optimism. Experience teaches us that change can be sudden, discontinuous, and wrenching. Calculus draws its power by refusing to see that. It insists on a world without accidents, where one thing leads logically to another. Give me the initial conditions and the law of motion, and with calculus I can predict the future -- or better yet, reconstruct the past.

I wish that was something we could do now.

Your kind soul continues on in a better place, and for that much we're thankful.

We'll miss you...

“ To Cas and Brynn's whole family, Brynn was a beautiful person inside and out, and I will miss her. I got to know her intellect, strength, and caring nature first as her professor, and then as a friend. I will forever be impressed by her dedication to being a mother first and foremost. She was also an excellent teacher and contributed greatly in her profession. I learned so much from her. My deepest condolences, Gabriele
