“Brynn Curry and I met because my name is Brynn Canary, and somehow, I kept getting emails intended for him - the world is funny and small. I was so confused until one day, he walked into the salon where I worked, and as he gave me his name, I almost exclaimed, "Oh, YOU'RE Brynn!" I had never met anyone with the same name as me before!

I do professional organizing, and Brynn and Janelle were my very first clients. Your first clients are always special to you, and my appointments with Brynn were probably some of my favorite (and least professional!) - we were always cutting up and laughing about the ridiculousness of human beings. He gave me so much advice, personally and professionally, about all manner of things, from changing my name legally, to starting a business, to getting into grad school. He wrote my letter of recommendation to grad school, asked for updates about what was going on in my life, and was always excited for me when I made progress. My family and friends regularly heard about my "awesome clients" and how much I looked forward to my appointments with them. I last saw him in early March, and that appointment for some reason was just so fun and positive, I remember it was a highlight of my day.

I'm so grateful for the opportunity to have known Brynn for the short time that I did. He was a good man who looked out for people. In fact, the last text I received from him was him doing his best to look out for me - he had sent all of his service providers a small financial gift to help ease the burden COVID-19 had placed on us. He followed up to encourage me to just let him know if I needed him to purchase future services in advance, because he would be happy to do so. This is exactly the kind of thing he would do because this was just the kind of guy he was. I'm glad I was able to thank him before he passed. I wish I had told him directly how positive of an impact he had in my life. I will miss his confidence and snarky wit and all of the wonderful ways he connected with the people in his life.

Sending lots of love and light to his beautiful wife Janelle and amazing step-kiddo Willa, and to everyone else who was touched by Brynn's life. Brynn was always there for me, and I will always be here for you. 💕
