“ I was the Purdue's "partner" for their Habitat House. It was a privilege to get to know the whole family and to share in their experience of home ownership. A former co-worker at GE who still communicated with them filled me in on their life in South Carolina.

“ Curtis was more to me than just my best friend, we were like brothers he and I we did many things together, we got to know each other through Habitat for humanity when we became partner families with them many years ago, we hung about 5 ceiling fans in house for another family, we served on a committee together, we were supervisors for habitat's concession stands at the IU Basketball, football and soccer games to help the IU campus chapter to raise money to build their first house, we built a shed for his property even though he had moved to South Carolina we kept in touch often, he made several trips back here to bloomington and he always made time to stop by and see me while he was here, I will certainly miss our conversations about how things were going in our lives, Rest now my brother, soar with the eagles.....
