“ I took this picture with the oldest flip phone I've ever owned. The graphics aren't the greatest but you can make out the best of it.

"Study" session after school, which was just an excuse to hang out, play games and talk trash about everyone else. We made a pose and, during the circumstances, I couldn't stop laughing.

“ This was the day I met Evan. It was a chilly October show day back in 2014. Edgewood's and Beech Grove's bands mingled together huddling for warmth in the stands. The two of us wound up sitting next to each other. We were both so awkward yet intrigued by each other. We wound up talking a lot and eventually we ended up dating. He was my first boyfriend. While we couldn't always be together because we lived so far away, we always made time to talk on the phone or video call. They were cheerful happy times and I'm glad I get to cherish those memories of us forever. You will never be forgotten Evan, I promise. (I'm the awkward one wearing the tardis hat)

“ I met Evan through the Wilson family. He always offered to come help me with my horse stall or spend time with us around the fair. He was a sweet soul and always made me laugh. My favorite picture I have of him is laughing and eating popsicles in the wilsons camper. He will be greatly missed.

“ I want to share a memory but I am not even sure where to start or which one to choose out of all of them that have floated through my head in the last few days. I have so many, from the day you was born to every birthday party you had to just quiet summer days spending time together (you kids, your mom and dad, my kids and us). I just want you and your momma and dad and Madi and Amber to know how blessed I feel for being allowed to be a part of your family for your whole life. I will forever cherish all the thousands of memories we've shared along the way. We will forever honor you, your love, your kind soul, your jokes, your intelligence and so much more. I think one of my favorite memories (although I have many) is from when you was around 2 years old. You, being the adventurous little boy, got on your tricycle and decided to ride down the road in just a diaper. Your momma caught up with you and asked where you thought you was going. You told her to Shannon and Kennys...like duh mom lol. I pray you always knew we loved you as our own just as we did your sisters and you parents and just as your mom and dad did our kids and us. I love you bubba! You and your family are forever a part of us, our family, our boy.

“ Although I didn't know Evan well, I do have a fond memory of him to share. Evan frequently (probably more often than I would like to admit!) delivered Dominos pizza to my home. Evan was always kind and courteous, but one day in mid January while delivering my pizza, Evan, my husband and I engaged in more conversation than usual. It was very cold that night, I had worked a long day and had come home tired and hungry. When I ordered the pizza online I included a note apologizing and explaining that my porch light was burnt out. When Evan came to the door he had a friendly smile as always, in spite of the lack of light and the freezing temperature. He waited patiently while I corralled my dogs to keep them from running out when the door was opened. My husband opened the door and we invited Evan inside out of the cold. Evan replied that he wasn't allowed to come inside as it is a Dominos policy. My husband and I agreed that it's probably a good policy as so many different kinds of people order pizza. Evan joked and said, "Yeah, you would really be surprised at how many places I deliver to that smell like marijuana". My husband and I laughed and thought it was a funny and probably very true statement. Even though it was freezing, Evan stood on my porch and continued to engage in conversation with us. Although we just chatted for a few minutes and engaged in a superficial conversation, it was meaningful. Evan made us laugh and he was kind. I am so sad to hear of Evan passing. Evan and his family have weighed heavily on my heart since I heard the news. We need more people like Evan in this world who are friendly and demonstrate kindness to others. Often it's the little interactions that we have with one another that make such a big difference. Evan will be missed by all that knew him well, and by those of us who were just lucky enough to have crossed paths with him too. Rest in peace Evan 🙏

“ Evan was a friend of mine throughout high school. I met Evan in marching band. We were almost immediately friends. Evan was always cracking jokes and trying to make me smile, even when I was having a bad day. He always knew how to make people laugh. Evan always made me feel like I fit in, and I thank him for that.

“ I know we have been in your life probably the shortest amount of time, but in this past year the times that we have been around you, we feel incredibly blessed to have met you. Your smile, your laugh as we battled each other in lawn games or just sat around and were able to talk for a short time. They will all be missed. We are better people for having met you. And in the short time we were able to get to know you, you left footprints that can never be filled. Love you and your family. The Buehls

“ I have so many but the funniest one was priceless. The kids and I were out at the house and Evan and Madi wanted me to meet THE Pig ! I told Evan “ ya know I’m really afraid of pigs .”And without missing a beat Evan said (in his matter of fact voice with a slight yell) “ Well that PIG is afraid of You! “ I Love you Evan and will miss you for the rest of my life

“ I met Evan for the first time when we were both in the first grade at Edgewood Primary. I had just moved to Ellettsville and was very nervous about my first day in a new school. Evan was the first person to welcome me with open arms. And every day after that he would walk with me from the bus into the school because he knew I was nervous walking by myself. He would give me Mary Kay makeup samples he'd get from his grandma as well as tons of candy and other little gifts. He was there for me when I needed a friend. His kindness has stuck with me all these years later. I still reach out to the new person by offering them the seat next to me because I remember how accepted Evan made me feel. The world lost an amazing human this week.

“ I can't say enough about Evan. We crossed paths with him so many times in 4H, marching band and Dominoes. He will be missed and a great young man. He loved to have conversations and made a point of greeting every time we saw him. I remember the many hours we spent in the concession stand at Assembly Hall. He always was there to offer a helping hand. Many times he would go get Kevin's truck and take a bunch of us to our cars so we would not have to walk in the cold after working. Always a smile and genuine caring about others. He will be missed for sure. Sending out prayers for peace to Kevin, Michelle, Madi and the rest of the family at this very difficult time

“ I found these in your room last night... they were made out of love for you... they share the notes to your favorite song... they remind me of the bond we shared together over music along with numerous other things.... I will miss our intellectual talks we had, where you always shared your extreme knowledge and I tried to act like I had some... I learned over the years we shared numerous views on deep subjects... I remember sitting on your couch and your dad saying Evan turn that screaming shit down... I always had your back cause I shared the same love for that screaming shit music.... thank you for befriending my children even though you were older and wiser... you were such a positive and kind human being and role model.... I will miss you dearly.... your caring ways never went unnoticed... your light will always shine bright 💙
