“ I have a funny story to tell I came to live with Jesse and his family in 1995 or whenever the year of that super storm was in the Midwest on our way home one night from working at RCA we hit a patch of black ice in my Dodge Diplomat and went for about three Revolutions of a spin in the middle of the road and ended up down and embankment in someone's yard or mouths were wide open as we were both screaming while the car was spinning we could only look at each other in horror anyway we ended up stranded there for a bit as a state trooper slid by hours later saying he would be back to help us and never came back we waited for quite a long time until an old man he looked like he was about a hundred years old and a white Jeep with no seats in it stopped to help us he had literally everything you could imagine for the situation in his car nothing worked so he ended up giving Jesse and me a ride home we were probably only about two or three miles away from home when it happened it was Sub-Zero we laughed about that for years I am his Aunt Cathy by marriage
