“ He was one amazing guy. He kids loved him more then the world. You could tell his boys were everything to him. He is now your special guardian angel and he is watching over his family. As I know you question why god done this why he allowed this to happen (i know some of your feeling cause I had it with my little girl when she passed) these are all normal feeling and questions. But remember god has a reason for everything even if we don't k ow or dont agree or understand. He had a wonderful life while he was here and his family met the world to him. Hang on to those memories and keep your head up high and yes talking daily about him is k to do. Make him proud of you all and be strong for the boys as they will have questions about their daddy. He wouldn't want you to sat around and have sad feelings he would want you to remember happy thoughts and continue for the boys as that's going to help the boys cope. This is a difficult time though in your life and yes very sad so please lean on friends and family over your heeling process everyone is here for you and boys and family you need to talk a shoulder to cry on or whatever is needed please don't bottle it up please reach out to someone. Everyone at little angels daycare preschool is praying and thinking about you and the boys. Sending lots of prayers love and all my heart 🙏❤️ Remember he was one amazing one amazing person
